Global Minerals & Industry Safety Risk Management Course

This intensive 4-day program will:

- Initiate a change in risk management in operations and disciplines through improving your understanding and practice of risk management.
- Challenge and affect the way you decide, behave, lead and live as managers with regard to risks.

Recognizing that safety is one area where companies can and should collaborate, Anglo American is making a highly-acclaimed and award-winning education program available to the whole industry to contribute to a systemic change in safety and risk management. Insights, gained not just from the mining industry but from the nuclear, aviation and chemical sectors have informed and shaped this education program. Through the University of Queensland, a global network of universities in major mining regions is being set up to deliver this world-class program. In Canada, the course will be delivered by the Robert M. Buchan Department of Mining at Queen's University. The course is the Global Minerals Industry Risk Management course, G-MIRM.
